physical discomfort, loss of sleep, exposure to bed bugs & his 7 mosquitos - were attendant.
 Then, at midnight, last night, when arising to go on duty, feeling rain caused me to unbutton my "lounge". You hit raincoat off his bed while he was asleep. After some unpleasant six or seven hours I returned to baby to prepare for breakfast to find you were resentful and hostile about the food and unpleasantly critical about bed bugs. While I was washing Brooks inspecting and found one bed bug on my bedding that I had taken to the ward #. So I found my leg in "Doc. Clanton's position" - in the crippled or ailing patient's position, or in the position of one who is incapacitated! Profoundly unpleasant! Man's inhumanity to man! and all that kind of crap. Right now I am highly opposed toward bedding myself out of self-pity. On the whole, the experience is being beneficial — trust haven't cut into the soul of me for time's expansion of life which my time comes to write. I went back in a good game of chess yesterday. I got through in 10 days with my tools, carried a better description somewhere to his shop. A couple of minutes later it appeared over my head and back returning to somewhere. It was surely, unbecomingly, and unbecomingly dead in a foreign and possibly hostile world. Every few feet it stopped, studied the terrain and all moving things, watching, listening. Its tongue, its ears, and its instincts, wild cautions were made more appalling by the address of its markings.

 From the ground up it started to be a black, grey and white tiger kitten, its legs and arms its head bearing the pronounced stripes. But its body coloring was almost a dark grey blending

I watched it, full hip in love with it, but did not think of calling it or attempting to pick it up. I got up from my table seat to walk away for a light for my cigarette. Coming back, I found the little animal clinging my seat. I picked it up and its response was instant, affectionate, utterly winning. Now, as I sit here watching it is curled in my lap, sometimes napping, sometimes stretching and sleepily observing.

I saw my first P.I. caterpillar yesterday. It is by sugar issue, 37 lbs to commissary, 5 to each mess then substitute & some thru surface & by commissary otherwise, to # 1 mess ship that the 37 lbs of sugar is only a part of it. 115 lbs ordered # 1 by trunk on board when ward-leader order sugar for every month deposit all for him.
