Summary of C 91st (Cable) Dec 28, 1941 - April 8, 1942

On December 28, 1941 Battery C 91st CRPS(AA) was located at the barrio of San Jose near Dinalupihan, Bataan. The organization at that time consisted of Battery C 91st CA Philippine Scouts, 71 men; detachments from Batteries A & C 2d CA(PA), 70 men; detachment from Hqs Fort Wint, Philippine Army Regulars, 5 men; detachment from Battery D & Hqs 91st CA, Philippine Scouts, 17 men; and finally miscellaneous civilian truck drivers, Philippine Army Medical Personnel, and a few stragglers. The total strength at this time amounted to about 189 Filipinos and 3 American officers. The armament of this augmented battery comprised: four 3" M2 A1 <sup>AA guns</sup> with T&E3 director, power plant, and data transmission system; one T2 height finder; two 1941 Sperry searchlight sections complete; two Philippine Army water-cooled 50 cal machine guns; eight 30 cal Browning machine guns. Both armament and personnel represented salvage from the disastrous evacuation of Fort Wint. In addition there was a miscellaneous assortment of cargo trucks and commandeered vehicles.

At about 2 pm on this day Lieut Calloway of the 2d Bn 60th CA (AA) reported from Little Bignio with orders that C 91st was to move to the vicinity of Bataan Field as soon as the transportation provided by the 2d Bn could arrive, C 91st having no prime movers. Since the Battery Commander C 91st with all trucks was at Fort Stotsenberg obtaining supplies, Lt Shoss, the warden, kept the guns in position making what preparations he could while in action that afternoon. Since December 25th C 91st had been informally and ineffectually attached to the 1st Bn 60th CA. The Battery Commander arrived at 6 pm and because the 60th transportation was not to come until 8, immediately departed with Lt Calloway to reconnoiter a position. The orders concerning several times in the past, but their morale was low. Because the field was surrounded by a large quantity of high explosive bombs of all sizes. C-47's they hoped would be accurate and had the only weapons in a capable of action available to them. Some 500 Filipino civilian workmen arrived about 7:30 and, seeing the 49th Battery, cheered loudly. All hands on the field set about work with an inspired frenzy. Today they promised themselves they would not have to run from <sup>the</sup> bombs.

Their highly inspired enthusiasm had important results, however. The 49th Battery sawed away at the front, the tractor clanked and rattled, the workmen shouted. It was apparent that enemy planes could scarcely be heard, seen or fired upon in turn. The battery commander immediately re-arranged his tactical position and ordered Lt. Chase to move two guns there, the rest of the equipment was to follow in the evening. The workmen on the field were quite depressed to see the guns go.

Promptly at 10 a.m. the first Japanese planes came into sight. From then until three in the afternoon they came in flight after flight of heavy bombers, bombing Corregidor, circling Batavia, and coming in again. Two bombs fell upon Batavia Field that day for the target was Corregidor. Their course, however, took them over C-47 at time after time and the guns were in action continually for five hours. Targets were so plentiful that all could not be engaged. At least one heavy bomber type 97 staggered and smacked as a result of this battery's fire and later the claim was granted as such.

From Batavia Field the bombing of Corregidor was plainly visible. Great clouds and columns of smoke and debris rose continuously for five hours. An oil dump went up rolling bellows of flame and black smoke in the air. The roar and thunder of bombs was incessant. The AA guns could be seen flashing back. Many bursts were close and many planes seemed to have been damaged. Several flights lost altitude as they flew away and many ships lost their places in formation. Towards evening the fires glowed redly on the ridge and a burning ship drifted down the shore towards Monkey Point. This same day too Mariveles was levelled.

Early in the morning of the same day Major Breitung, commanding the 2d Bn 60th CA at Little Baguio<sup>head</sup>, visited the battery, offering help and looking over the set-up. He informed the battery commander that the order to move had come from Major General Sutherland. He confirmed the decision of the battery commander to move off the field and approved the new position at Calababan. He asked if the battery would like to be attached to the 2d Bn and, upon being so assured, stated that orders would be obtained as soon as possible. Thus C 91st joined the 2d Bn actually if not officially December 29th. The date of the order itself is not known.

At about 4pm the enemy air activity appeared to have ceased though the damage they had initiated was still in progress and much of the sky was overhung with smoke. C 91st pulled its two remaining guns out (the ones that fired all day), and with the balance of the equipment moved to the Calababan position where the other two had already been employed. The battery was ready to fire as a complete unit by 7 that night. All men, however, were completely exhausted having been without sleep of any sort since 6:00am of December 28th, made a move of some 60 kilometers, occupied two new positions and fired some 200 rounds. Troops had been served with regularity, however, and the observed success of the firing kept morale high.

On December 30th, early in the morning, the battery engaged an observation plane known to the troops in Batuan as 'Yoto Joe'. Bursts were exceedingly close, some obscuring the plane at times, and shortly after it had flown away at low altitude to the north. Lt Col Bunting drove up and announced that Barbara Hall, an O.P., reported the plane having crashed considerably north of them. Since no other battery had fired near the time, immediate confirmation was given by HDMASB.

From December 30th until January 5th C 91st on Cebu, the code name under HDMASB, was busy improving its position, ~~max~~ facilities, ~~with~~ communications, and organization. The searchlight sections, having no longer <sup>any</sup> lights, were converted into a machine gun platoon while the sound locators were used as listening posts to aid in the location of planes. From December 31st until January 5th the enemy air activity was great. The battery fired daily engaging many planes though none of the hits claimed were allowed. The Cebu docks and the shipping between there and Samar were daily bombing targets. Because the battery was so near and in the path, many bombs fell close to the position. Also whenever the AA batteries on Concepcion fired, Cebu received a generous serving of shell fragments. Yet no one was even scratched. The evening of January 4 Lieuts R. A. Krantz + T. J. Majors AC joined the organization as observers.

The morning and early afternoon of January 5th were much the same as on other days at Cebu. About 4 pm, however, the battery engaged a flight of three dive bombers which appeared from behind the mountains and were diving towards ~~the general vicinity of~~ Cabeber. Fire was opened at fuse range 12 and continued to descend to 6. At this latter figure a muzzle burst occurred. It came from the gun at that time firing over the CP and fire control positions. The blast of fragments swept across the height finder blowing the top off Pfc Javer's head and wounding Pvt Donaga, Majors and Saclar. In direct line the pieces shattered Lt Charles Page, a visiting air corps officer; punctured the chest and lungs of Lt Majors; creased the head of the battery commander; and wounded Lt Shoss in the foot. Further down the trench Pvt Albano standing in the entrance to the director pit absorbed all the rest of the fragments. Lt Shoss had been standing to one side near the guns. Lt Page had been on the other side of the CP outside the sandbags. All the others killed or wounded had been in the emplacements. The C.P. a small circular pit became a bath tub of blood. Lt Majors died in the arms of Capt Kahlitz. The height finder observer, his brains out, screamed horribly and flopped around for half a minute. Lt Page atrociously mangled had been killed instantly. Pvt Albano, the whole half of his body almost laid open lengthwise, still lived somehow. All dead and wounded were rushed to General Hospital #2 with the kind assistance of Lt Rice who opportunely came up with his car. Apart from the loss of life and morale the damage was negligible. The height finder tube had been pierced and shaken but was optically intact. Despite a later report by a QM officer that one of the dive bombers had fallen in the bay the battery went to bed that evening in gloom. The claim was never allowed.

Investigation of causes for the muzzle burst laid the blame upon a defective fuse. All fuses were customarily exercised before issue of a round to the guns. M8 fuse cutters were those used. Rounds were, by previous orders, checked after being cut but before being loaded. Many of the rounds in the lots of ammunition then in use were corroded around the fuses. Prior to firing, of course, they were cleaned, ~~and~~ checked, and even cut. Nevertheless these precautions could not guarantee the functioning of the powder train and it was concluded that it had been defective because of age.

On January 7th Cebu moved to Cemetery Ridge called delumban by the Filipinos. This position was on a prominent ridge overlooking Mariveles Harbor. It afforded protection to the installations there and to Mariveles Field then under construction. It also provided a more integrated anti aircraft defense, in conjunction with Globe, of certain approaches to Corregidor. The move itself was done in daylight with a minimum of two guns capable of firing at any one time.

From January 8th until 14th the battery improved its position and facilities. During this period it fired no rounds, partly because of orders from Corregidor not to engage single planes and partly because it was felt that its position should not be disclosed until a worthwhile target appeared. Japanese air activity over the area was slight that week also. On January 14, however, about 10:30 a.m. a flight of nine heavy bombers appeared from the northwest headed directly over Cebu towards Corregidor. Fire was opened at maximum range, bursts were in the formation obscuring several planes. When directly overhead one of the bombers staggered, smoked, and began to lose altitude. Flames were visible in its left engine; the plane jettisoned its bombs in the water. The rest of the formation was broken up. Another plane began to lose altitude, more bombs were jettisoned.

made a reconnaissance of many positions and by January 27th had selected the ridge just west of the Sulmbin position, about 1000 yards away. Preparations were made to move at any time and dummy guns and instruments were constructed to be left behind. The new position was planned in detail and arrangements were made with the Pacific Naval Air Base Contractors to use their coral machinery to open up several new roads. It was while building one of these that the battery commander was injured on the night of January 29th. Lt Shoss continued the work admirably.

On February 6th the battery moved under the cover of dark and was ready to fire and did so the morning of the seventh. On February 9th Lt Shoss claimed and received credit for one dive bomber. Again on February 12th the battery engaged a flight of two dive bombers and received credit for downing them both. The battery commander just out of the hospital witnessed the firing from Glabe.

About February 10th the detachment from D 96th was recalled to Fort Mulla despite the strenuous objections of 1st Lt B. Beckung and Captain Gulick. The battery was operating alone without any AA machine gun support except its own. It had at the time four 50 cal machine guns and dive bombers were becoming very prevalent if not actually attacking the position yet bombing the vicinity. Personnel was not sufficient to man both guns and machine guns and apparently Harbor Defense merely believed that the men could hop from weapon to weapon. Brig Gen Mangant, however, was able to order a Phil Army platoon of 50 men to be attached. And while these men were untrained they could be and were used as replacements until broken in.

This Phil Army platoon arrived February 13 and Lt Shoss who had been handling the machine gun defense immediately undertook their training. Lt Krantz, although an air corps pilot, had shown remarkable energy and ability in assuming anti-aircraft duties with the battery. 3d Lt Alexander Hoffman was in command of the Phil Army platoon, a part of Btry F 2d CA (PA). This same day too Captain Gulick returned to the battery and received a very emotional and inimitably Filipino welcome from his men. Col. Wm Brady, HD S-3 inspecting the 2d Bn 60th CA on Batuan, witnessed the reception and expressed great praise for the morale, position, and word of Cebu as a whole.

Visits and inspections from authorities higher than that of the Bn Comdr were all too few on Batuan. Lt Col E. H. Barr, executive of the 60th CA, had visited Cebu at Dilibin February 2. He came over from Corregidor again, the 15th. Naturally such visible display of interest raised the spirits of ~~the~~ organizations in the field. It was to be regretted that so few field officers could find themselves able to do so. Lt Col Barr as a result of his visits was able to procure certain supplies on Corregidor, vitally necessary for Cebu's functioning but incapable of any except person to person and on the spot explanation. Also except for the executive's action the batteries were inclined to feel that they were part of the 2d Bn rather than the 60th CA as a whole.

The Filipinos called the new position Tagumpay, or Victory, Hill. As time went on Cebu was able to make quite an installation there. In addition to well-constructed, camouflaged trenches, pits, and fortifications, the battery began tunnels for the storage of ammunition, built a bamboo swimming pool and erected squad "bahays" against the rainy season.

In the meantime training of the new men progressed. An additional T2 HX Finder was put to use because the old one was showing the effects of damage sustained in the midget burst. Two more .50 cal machine guns were employed and the crews were composed of the PA men. On February 28 Cebu was awarded claim for one dive bomber fired upon that day. The director was functioning well and its crew understood it thoroughly. During this period and up till March 24 enemy air activity was very slight, although no day went by without seeing a Japanese plane. No heavy bombers, however, were sighted or reported for some time.

On March 24 the final Japanese offensive began. It opened with the bombing of Corregidor for one week. From Taguigay Hill Cebu could see day after day great plumes of dust and smoke rising from the island like distorted groves of bamboo in the distance. The batteries on Corregidor fired bravely in the midst of rising and falling debris. The bombers, however, after a losses, flew higher and higher. They soon bombed out of range of the 21 sec fuse. Yet the 30 sec projectiles took heavy toll. Major General Moore visited Cebu during this period, probably March 27.

Soon the Japanese turned all their attention to Batavia. On March 30 a dive bomber attack of about 9 planes was directed against the Mariveles area. C 9's at them everything it had at them. Planes flew low over the battery scattering bombs and machine gunning. One diving on the "Dewey" drydock was claimed as a hit ~~by~~ and later granted by Lt Col Breitung. Daily, however, hereafter heavy bombers and dive bombers delivered attacks on Mariveles, Little Baguio and the air fields. The constant thunder and explosion of heavy bombs on the front lines could be heard. Dive bombers were numerous but fleeting. Cebu engaged these latter for the heavy bombers were flying too high. The tempo of attacks intensified. Again on April 6 there was a dive bombing attack on Mariveles this time by seaplanes. They flew very low and one was forced to the water just west of Cebu. The battery claiming that it had done the damage so far, endeavored to finish the job with high explosive horizontal fire. About two hours later the plane sank. Afterward this plane was designated as a hit, by Lt Col Breitung.

In this period also the Japanese began night bombing with small flights of one to three planes. These too, however, flew too high to be properly taken under fire by the battery.

Disquieting rumors began to filter back from the front as the enemy attacks increased. The heavy and light bombing raids were more frequent and more severe. The hospitals at Little Baguio were hit. The dumps and installations around Mariveles were constant targets. Cebu, however, owing to its position on a knife-like ridge suffered no casualties though fragments fell upon it from nearby bombs. The evening of April 7 Lt Col Breitung instructed Capt Kulik to <sup>have the battery</sup> stand by as reserve reinforcement for the front but in the meantime to continue as AAA.

Early in the afternoon of April 8 the Bn Comdr telephoned to say that he was going to attempt to establish a reserve line with the 60th troops at Little Baguio. Units from the PA had begun to drift down the road and news from the front was very bad. The 60th troops if necessary would be ordered up and would proceed in their own transportation. After that had been decided it would be sent back for C 91st. Towards Evening Lt Col Brantung telephoned again to say that attempts to stem the tide of retreating troops was hopeless, the break-thru had become a rout. ~~The Navy at Mariveles had blown up its tunnels late that afternoon.~~ There were sounds of distant disturbances but the immediate vicinity seemed ominously quiet, that is such noise that was made sounded excessive.

At 9 pm the Bom Comdr telephoned again to announce that everything was 'off'. No reserve line would be established, Hqs, E, & G batteries were to move to Conquistador by barge, withdrawal to the hills for the battalion as a whole was unfeasible, Cebu must destroy its guns by dawn. In the meantime every effort was to be made to locate the 37mm and 3" AA guns belonging to the 200th CA. C 9/1st was to receive and hold them until further orders.

Captain Gulick alerted the battery, explained the situation, and made preparations for destroying the equipment. About this time ammunition dumps began to detonate. The "Canopus" blew up in Mariveles Harbor settling heavily in shallow water. The sky flashed oddly with explosions and the air resounded spasmodically with the erratic trajectories of exploded particles. An earthquake, a natural one, of medium severity shook the ground for about ten minutes. An excited group of about seven men arrived with a truck load of tires. They belonged to the 200th CA and had escaped from Butuan Field when it was surrounded by the enemy at sugar time.

Lt Col Brantung telephoned for the last time. He had no orders for Cebu except to destroy its equipment before dawn. Shells were falling around his CP. He urged protection of the left flank where Japanese infantry were supposed to have penetrated. It was good luck & goodbye.

The battery commander placed two machine guns on his left, <sup>back</sup> and forward. Beyond them he organized patrols.

 Lt Irish was sent to contact the Air Corps Group in the next valley so that a line might be established.
 About this time the big ammunition dump at Little Boquis went off. The Navy at Maricao blew their tunnels; it raised fragments. Lt Irish reported back that the Air Corps Group intended to do nothing but that there was a laager at Maricao reserved for the North. Major Massell had said that if Cuba would represent itself as part of the North 2d Div it might evacuate to Comayagua provided it was able to reach Maricao within two hours.
 Captain Rubin decided to evacuate what he could and not delay the destruction of equipment.

Lt Balfanz was ordered to take the 50 cal machine guns and crews including the subjects to Maricao immediately. Other men were to destroy equipment and so taken to the dock in relays. The battery having only three trucks altogether. Unfortunately two trucks were wrecked in the darkness and the third containing the machine guns and crews failed to return. The director and other instruments were smashed, the guns were fired minus oil with all possible parts blown.
 Lt Pflieger's Sgt Dodson set the small arms on fire, the ammunition tunnels, saturated with gasoline, exploded like gigantic cannon.
 Two kilometers the big anti-aircraft depot was thunderously upured.
 Taguayay full of stuff was ablaze with burning trees and buildings. By 6 a.m.
 the battery, some 150 men, <sup>gathered</sup> on the ~~in~~ off ~~waiting~~, ~~waiting~~ for transportation. At length Lt Irish made a trip in a passenger car and returned to say that the laager for Comayagua was about to pull out and could wait no longer. The trucks had been wrecked to block Maricao inflicted. The battery commander and his remaining officers and men then marched to Mowulak. Dawn was breaking, the sky was lightening and explosions still resounded.

At Mowulak no large war vessel, only a small launch waiting for the Japanese demolition squad.
 As Cebu turned around toward Cebu's Point all seemed over. Yet at the last minute Lt. Stross jumped upon the launch, ordered the tow an empty launch ~~at anchor~~ back toward Cebu. An Engineer officer gave his promise to use the launch and launch, preparing an unhampered and speedier boat just arriving. The rest of responsibility he said was Captain Kubioka. At that <sup>point</sup> three ~~of~~ bombers were in action beyond Cebu. The drive was obvious. Cebu and miscellaneous other troops made that last try, miserably watching the strike, some places somehow the slow ~~try~~ <sup>try</sup> were equal.
 All reached Concepcion in time for a bombing. Three men were lost in the encounter at Concepcion when call was called, but Cebu was ready to go the next again as an anti-aircraft battery.

Cebu had reached Concepcion with some 202 officers and men, properly its own. From this time on its duties were seaward and belong properly to its original assignment the 91st CAPB. From the beginning of the war until December 21 at <sup>least</sup> part of the 1st West Garrison and while there served for two dive bombers. December 26-28 it had been with the 200th at Davao and had been credited two heavy ~~and~~ then. At Batavia Field whether under the 200th or the 60th it claimed one plane. Under the harbor defenses it added ~~several~~ to the one. The total planes downed and captured was 15.
